Biographical Note

Fort Worth resident Bror Utter (1913–1993) translated modernist European and American influences into a personal idiom of enigmatic, abstract forms suggesting the human figure, plant life, and architecture. Utter's interest in art was fostered by his Texas environment. He received training in painting and etching at the Fort Worth School of Fine Arts in the 1930s and worked in his father's lithographic printing company until the 1950s. Utter was part of a small, dynamic group of artists now known as the "Fort Worth Circle," which was the city's avant-garde art community during the 1940s and 1950s. His association with these artists, several of whom had studied in New York and Paris, exposed him to contemporary art beyond the confines of Fort Worth. Utter's response to this stimuli was an innovative pictorial language of biomorphic shapes, characterized by a playful use of texture and color. Continuing to explore new subjects and styles, he became a prominent Fort Worth artist, teacher, and supporter of the arts.

Scope and Content Note

The Bror Utter Papers contain exhibition catalogues, photographs, newspaper and magazine clippings, and correspondence dating from 1944 to 1992 (bulk dates 1950s–1960s). The papers offer a unique insight into the vibrant life of Fort Worth artists, especially those of the Fort Worth Circle, which included William Bomar and Dickson Reeder. The papers contain many examples of Utter's artworks and give glimpses into his personal experiences through his correspondence and photographs. Of significance is the influence on his artwork of his trip to Europe as evidenced in his photographs.

The papers, which came to the museum stored in loose stacks with little apparent order, have been organized into three series: Papers, Professional, and Photographic. All three series have been arranged in chronological order where possible, unless otherwise noted.

Papers: This series contains Utter's correspondence and other personal mementos from his travels and from his friends. Included are personal and professional correspondence as well as sundry clippings and catalogues about Utter and his associates in the Fort Worth Circle.

Professional: Information on a sizeable number of exhibitions of his personal work as well as newspaper and magazine articles about Utter are found here.

Photographic: A series of photographic reproductions of Utter's work, photographs from his trips in Europe and the United States, and personal photographs of him and his friends and colleagues in the studio and abroad are contained in this series.

A more detailed series description appears at the start of each series in this finding aid.

Series I. Papers

Scope and Content Note: This series contains Utter's personal and professional correspondence and mementos from his travels and from his friends. Items of particular interest include a loan agreement between Utter and Texas Christian University for a display of his artwork in the campus gallery in 1985; a transcript of a 1979 interview with Bror Utter conducted by Lisa Ferguson on behalf of the Archives of American Art; postcards from Utter's travels; gallery invitations; and exhibition and collection catalogues for Utter's friends and fellow Fort Worth artists.
